

AUTO HIT BY TRAIN-ONE KILLED

Only 18 out 162

Dairies Supplying Plant Tested

According to present indications the Mokena plant of the Bowman Dairy plant will close its doors April 1st. In an interview, Herman Schweser, local manager of the plant, stated that the farmers had been given time since last November to test their cattle but had wrangled over the question for a few months and that now there would not be time enough to test all the dairies supplying the plant, before the first of April. Many farmers are even now refusing to test.

Out of 162 dairies supplying milk to the Mokena plant, 18 were tested recently. Out of 402 cows tested 182 or 44 per cent reacted under the test.

All those farmers who have had their cattle tested and who are now bringing their milk to the local plant will have a market for their milk just the same after the local plant closes, as the Bowman company want a sufficient supply for any will have trucks come out to pick up such milk. If the dairymen should decide to all test their cows and enough milk can be secured to warrant a sufficient supply for bottling, the plant may be re-opened again, but Mr. Schweser thinks it will take all summer before this is done.

On the other hand the dairymen say they are not opposed to the test if they would be given a square and just deal.

Closing of the Bowman plant will hit Mokena hard as it has been the means of bringing much farm trade to town. This plant has been in operation here for 18 years and during that time has only been closed a few weeks, and that during milk strikes. Quite a number of men will also be thrown out of employment. The plant has been handling 36,000 pounds of milk daily.

S. W. Towns Chamber of Commerce Applies for Charter

Constitution and
By Laws Approved

The Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce recently begun at Oakland and later organized at Oak Lawn, has applied to the Secretary of State for a charter and gives all indications that it is going to be the biggest institution this section of the country has ever known.

At the meeting held Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Worth Community church the constitution and by laws of the chamber as drafted by the by-laws committee were read and adopted, some with modifications and changes.

Orland Wants
More Hard Roads

A petition to raise a special tax for hard roads, signed by a large percentage of land owners and voters of Orland Township, has been filed with the Town Clerk, by Conrad Andres.

This proposition will be submitted to the voters, at the annual Town Election, to be held on Tuesday April 6. The petition calls for the levying of a special tax not to exceed 66 2-3 cents on the One Hundred Dollars assessed valuation of all taxable property in said Township.

Orland Township has been making marked progress, during the past four or five years, in the building of hard roads, the County has contributed in a generous way, in helping to build a portion of this hard road extension, and the Town has received some aid from the State, and a position to receive further help from the same source, in the form of crushed stone, and building the roads.

Considering the increased labor scale of wages, higher freight rates prevailing at the present time, and increased cost of material for road building purposes, any one can readily see that no Highway Commissioner can make much progress in constructing hard roads if he has to depend solely on a portion of the Road and Bridge Fund for this purpose, as a large percentage of this fund is required for road and bridge maintenance throughout the Township.

Now we all believe in hard roads and good roads, (and especially so when the "Ford" or the "Cadillac" as the case may be, gets mired in that sticky mud road, or slips sideways into the ditch, and you have to get out and help push, and perhaps it's Sunday and you have on your Sunday-go-to-meeting duds, you have left your rubbers at home! Oh well it's just as well you have, as you would probably leave them stuck in the mud) so let us get behind this hard roads movement. We have had some help from outside sources, let us try and help ourselves aid the other fellow, by getting out and voting for this hard roads proposition on Election Day.

In case it should occur to some voter and tax payer located along a hard road, to vote against this proposition, because he already has a satisfactory outlet to town, and he might save a few dollars in taxes if this measure should be voted down, we would like to remind him "that the other fellow still located along the dirt road", probably helped to pay for the hard road that makes this satisfactory outlet to town and back possible, and if he believes at all in the "Golden Rule" this would be a good opportunity to put it into practice.

This might also apply to the voter who figures that because the hard road will not be constructed by his gate in the near future, he might just as well vote against the proposition, we hope that no voter will consider it in that light, as that would be a short sighted policy, and on that basis we never would get roads.

We have at the present time in Orland Township five and one half miles of stone road and the outlook for more paved roads is promising, so let us all get behind this hard roads measure and push and keep pushing until Orland Township is out of the mud and on the map.

A Tax Payer

tions and changes. The annual dues were set at $2 per year instead of $3 as was at first suggested.

Mr. Olson of the Chicago Regional Planning Association was present and gave a comprehensive outline of the workings of that body and said this commission would help the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce wherever possible in their effort to promote the building of the newly proposed Southwest highway from Chicago to Joliet and thence down the Wolf road thru Mokena south to the Lincoln highway.

A large number of new members were enrolled at the Worth meeting. The next meeting of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce will be held at the Liberty Hall, Chicago Ridge on the night of March 30 at 8 o'clock.

OAK LAWN
CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
NEWS

The Ladies News met at the home of Mrs. Peter Jense last Thursday. Much fun and excitement was had over the Vanishing Imaginary Lunch cans given for the benefit of the parsonage building fund.

At the monthly cabinet meeting of the church the board of trustees were appointed a committee to investigate the possibilities of either purchasing a house or else building a new parsonage on the church property. This report will be made Friday evening, March 19 when the church will have a general-get-together.

A church choir is practicing several short anthems for Palm Sunday and Easter. This along with the special program of the Beginners Department of the Sunday School is going to make Easter a very attractive service.

The Young People's Society has named a nominating committee which will report on the evening of March 21st. A very altruistic spirit has prevailed as evidenced by the fact that the society voted to give every child in the church school a plant as an Easter gift.

Along with the regular services every Sunday at 11:00 and every Wednesday at 8:00 there will be a special Good Friday service at 8:00 o'clock in the evening on April 2nd. Communion services will be held at that time.

Last Sunday, Rev. Mr. E. A. Reese preached on the theme of Salvation. A note worthy sentence was "We are lost in an orgy of rushing business and have so little time to think our way out, in fact

A. SODERLUND KILLED AND WIFE
SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN FLIER
HITS AUTO ON ORLAND CROSSING

The concrete highway crossing north of the Wabash depot at Orland was the scene of a fatal auto wreck Thursday afternoon when a Ford sedan driven by A. Soderlund of Orland was struck by the northbound Wabash flier due at Orland at 4:20 p. m. The sedan was literally torn to pieces and thrown on the southbound track. The body of Mr. Soderlund with part of the steering wheel under his arm was found about 15 feet from the car.

Accompanying Mr. Soderlund was his wife who was seriously injured and at once rushed to a hospital. No one, but the engine crew witnessed the fatal crash. The northbound dummy was standing in the switch near the depot and it is thought may have obscured the view of the approaching flier. The crossing in question is a bad one as the views of approaching trains from either way are obscured by buildings and a high hill. A wig wag signal and warning bell are in use at this crossing but are not sufficient protection. It has been suggested that the Orland village board ought to petition the Wabash railroad to place a flagman or gates at this crossing as a better means of protection.

Mr. Soderlund was about 50 years of age and lived on a farm west of the Raney subdivision. He had resided in this locality for many years. He is survived by four sons. The sympathy of the community goes out to the grief stricken survivors.

A car driven by Alfred Schilling was struck on this same crossing last Thursday. The rear end of the car was just grazed by train and only slight damage resulted. No one was hurt. Of late the Wabash railroad has been hard hit by crossing fatalities in this region. Only a few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O'Brien of Oak Lawn were killed at Oak Lawn when their sedan was hit by Wabash flier.

An Age of Lawlessness

By REV. C. H. BENSON
Director of Religious Education Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—In those days there was no king in Israel. Every man did that which was right in his own eyes.—Judges 21:25.

In the land of Canaan the children of Israel seemed to have reached the Utopia of their existence. They were of one family, one language and one religion, with a unity of historical associations and a uniformity of conditions and customs that were favorable for a perfect democracy. But no democracy in history has proved such a dismal disaster. In a word the book of Judges spells failure. The children of Israel had thrown off the industrial laws of Egypt, the religious laws of Moses and the military laws of Joshua. "Every man did what seemeth right in his own eyes." Every man was an outlaw.

The contrast between the days of the judges and the present time is striking. It is a lamentable fact that the era of prosperity and progress that we enjoy is an age of lawlessness. Principles, ideas, motives, ideals, are all clashing. Men are turning consciously or unconsciously against established thought. In every relationship of life some of the commonly accepted opinions have been thrown on the scrap heap. Any method or idea that is old is under suspicion. There is a revolt, not organized as yet, against authority of any kind. Lawlessness is the spirit of the times. Analyze every expression and you will find it is unwillingness to be controlled.

The spirit of lawlessness prevails in the home. There is practically no discipline in many English-speaking homes. Every child is a law unto himself. In the majority of homes if there is a voice of authority it is the voice of a child. School is often a jail sentence between good times.

The spirit of lawlessness prevails in society. Despite our vast and expensive system of education America today is the most criminal nation in the world. Every nine minutes a major crime is committed. Every second thirty dollars is stolen. One out of seven marriages ends in a divorce. There is no restraint of tradition because there is no tradition. There is no restraint of modesty because there is no modesty. Men refuse to be controlled by any custom or conventionality.

A spirit of lawlessness prevails in religion. Back of all the unrest and spirit of revolt is the question as to God and the church. The right and ability of God to speak in the affairs of men is questioned. Church discipline must be harmless to be helpful. Church doctrine must be apologetic to be acceptable. The spirit of today is expressed in the words of the psalmist: "Let us break their bands asunder and cast away their cords from us."

When we study astronomy and contemplate the obedience of a multitude of suns and systems to divine law, or remember the marvelous submission of a myriad of glorious angels to the word and will of God, we are astonished that puny, insignificant man alone of all God's creatures should say, "I will not be controlled."

As a matter of fact, all men are controlled. When they imagine they are liberated from the laws of God and are outlaws so to speak, they are still subject to the laws of nature and the laws of men, which are ordained by God. They will not be controlled by God so they are controlled by sin, which is the transgression of the law of God. They are out of harmony with heaven, but they are not out of the control of death, which is the penalty of all transgression of the law. Just why men should be outlaws and prefer the control of sin rather than the control of God is hard to imagine. God is an intelligent being. Therefore his control will be for an infinite, wise end. God is a perfect moral being, therefore his control will be for a good end. God is a powerful being, therefore his control will be for a glorious and victorious end.

"Be wise now, therefore, all ye kings, be instructed ye judges of the earth, serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling. Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him."

Truth Seekers

The truth-seeker is the only God-seeker. No matter where you are, no matter in what age of the world, no matter how far from the central point of any religion, no matter how feeble you are, you are all God's children; and, if there is a wish in your heart for the truth, that wish instantly brings the Omnipotent to your side. Every wish for truth is a wish for God.

The Service of Sin

No vassalage is so ignoble, no servitude so miserable, as that of vice; mines and galleys, mills and dungeons, are words of ease compared to the service of sin; therefore, the bringing sinners to repentance, is so noble, so tempting a design, that it drew even God Himself from heaven to prosecute it.—Baxter.

JESUS DIES AND ARISES FROM THE DEAD

LESSON TEXT—John 19:17-30; 20:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life that I may take it again.—John 10:17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Dies and Rises From the Dead.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dies and Rises From the Dead.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dies and Rises From the Dead.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ Dying for Our Sins and Rising Again for Our Justification.

1. Jesus Crucified (vv. 17-30).
1. The place (v. 17).
It was on a hill called In Latin Calvary, in Hebrew Golgotha, which in shape resembled a skull.
2. His companions.
2. Two malefactors (v. 18, cf. Luke 23:32).
This shows how completely Jesus was identified with sinners.

3. The inscription over Him (v. 19, 20).
It was customary to place an inscription over the cross stating the crime for which the victim suffered.

4. Gambling for the garments of Jesus (vv. 23, 24).
This is an exhibition of how men's hearts may be so callous as to plan and act for present gain under the shadow of the cross of Christ.

5. Utterances from the cross (vv. 25-30).
(1) "Behold thy son"—"Behold thy mother" (vv. 25, 26).
In this crucial hour He forgot His own bitter anguish and interested Himself in those He loved. Though He was leaving the earth and its struggles, He made provision for the dear ones left behind.

(2) "I thirst" (v. 28).
As the sinner's representative, He suffered not only untold agony of mind, but of body as well.

(3) "It is finished" (v. 30).
While no one can fathom the depth of meaning in these words, they do no doubt indicate (a) that the calamities and indignities heaped upon Him were at an end.

6. His death (v. 30).
His death was voluntary. With full consciousness that all things which He had come to do had now been accomplished, He dismissed His spirit.

11. The Resurrection of Jesus (20:1-29).
1. The empty tomb (vv. 1-10).
(1) The testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1, 2).
This woman, out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:20), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John.

(2) Personal investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3-10).
The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought with breathless haste so moved John and Peter that they both ran to investigate.

(3) The manifestations of the risen Lord (vv. 11-29).
(1) To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18).
(a) Mary weeping at the empty tomb (v. 11).
Peter and John went home, but Mary could not—she stood weeping. She should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty, for the empty tomb was an eloquent proof of His messianic death.

(b) Mary questioned by the angels (vv. 12, 13).
She viewed through her tears angels at the tomb, who inquired the cause of her sorrow.

(c) Jesus reveals Himself to Mary (vv. 12, 13).
She first saw angels, and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. She did not recognize Him in His resurrection body but His voice was familiar to her. As soon as her name was called she recognized Him and worshiped at His feet.

(d) Jesus forbids her to touch Him (v. 17).
This shows that she was now coming into a new relationship with Him. Besides, there was no time for such familiarity while the disciples were in darkness. "Go tell my brethren," was the message for her to carry.

(e) Mary's testimony (v. 18).
(2) To the disciples (vv. 19-20).
(a) When Thomas was absent (vv. 19-23).
He came to them with the message of peace (v. 19), showed His hands and side (v. 20), commissioned them (v. 21) and bestowed upon them the Holy Spirit (v. 22).

(b) When Thomas was present (vv. 24-29).
Victory over Thomas' skepticism was realized by the sight and touch of the Lord.

To Make True the Dream

The most valuable possession which Christianity holds for me is this conviction: That the task is unfinished, that the conflict is still on, and that it is my business to invest my life in such a way as to make true the dream of the Son of Man.—Edward A. Steiner.

Depend on Jesus

Never let earthly things, not even the bitterest sorrow, blind you to the presence of Jesus.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

TAKING CANDY FROM CHILDREN

LOVE of sweet things seems to be well nigh universal, among civilized children, at least. Yet it is probably an acquired taste. Stefansson says he found a tribe of Eskimos in the Arctic who had never seen a white man until he visited them. They had never tasted salt or sugar. Given food which was salted, they refused to eat it. If a piece of candy was put in their mouths, they spat it out with a look of great disgust.

If it is an acquired taste, it must develop very early among American children. That its use among children and adults has increased enormously in the last generation is shown not only by the greatly increased importation of sugar, but also by the large number of candy stores. When I was a boy we looked forward to Christmas on account of its candy boxes quite as much as we did for its trees and presents. Today candy can be gotten all the year round.

What should the parent do about the candy problem: give the child no candy at all, give it all it wants or adopt a wise middle course?

There is no reason why an ordinarily healthy child should not have a certain amount of sugar. Sugar is good food. It is easily dissolved and absorbed. It furnishes a large amount of heat and energy. It is not only harmless but beneficial if taken in reasonable amounts and in proper proportion to other foods. But it should always be regarded as a food. The trouble with the excessive use of candy in this country is that it is regarded not as a food but as a luxury. Overweight girls and women will eat three large meals a day and then consume a big box of candy between meals and be surprised that they continue to gain weight.

Children used to be told that candy would make their teeth decay. That is not true, except in the sense that, if they eat large quantities of candy, they will naturally eat less of bone and teeth-building foods.

The French learned long ago that sweets should only be eaten at the end of the meal. Try eating your ice cream or pie before your soup, if you want to know why.

Give children candy only at meal time. Give it to them at the end of their dinner. Give them the smallest amount that will satisfy them. Give it to them in the form of simple sugar candies which will last as long as possible. The soft, heavy, quickly eaten candies, often made of rich chocolate, fruits and nuts are bad for the child, largely because they satisfy his appetite and keep him from eating better foods which his body needs.

THE LONG HAUL AND THE SHORT HAUL

SOME years ago, as many readers will remember, there was much discussion in railroad circles about the long haul and the short haul. This problem, which vitally affected everybody interested in transportation, was hotly debated by railroad men before the Interstate Commerce commission. Yet it only affected the transportation of merchandise from one state to another.

There is another long haul and short haul problem, which is far more important, and which is still unsettled. It affects the way in which every baby in the country gets its food. So it really means the life of every baby, for to the infant, even more than to the adult, food is life.

In a pamphlet issued by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company on milk, the first statement is a startling one. It is that 90 per cent of the babies in the country get their food through a tube 60 miles long. This tube starts with the cow, then through the barn to the creamery or milk depot, then by train to the town, then by delivery wagon to the house, by bottle to the back door step and the ice box and, finally, by the feeding bottle to the baby. This line naturally varies in length, being longest in large cities, far from the dairy farms and shortest in small towns. But even at its best, it is open in many places, where the milk is handled by many people, and where it can be and often is frequently polluted. The length of time it takes to cover this long haul also varies, from an hour or two to thirty-six to forty-eight hours.

The short haul is nature's plan. It is from the mother direct to the baby. It is practically instantaneous. The milk is not exposed to light, to dirt or flies or germs or dirty hands or pails or bottles.

Nature's plan is that the food of the young of all animals, human included, should be their own mother's milk. Cow's milk is good for older persons, but God never intended it for human babies. Cow's milk is for cow babies, just as mother's milk is for human babies. Mother's milk is the best food for babies. If the mother can supply it, the baby has a right to it from the time he is born until he is eight or nine months old.

Ten bottle-fed babies die to one breast-fed baby. So if babies could vote, they'd be unanimous in favor of the short haul.

Let Tanlac restore your health

If your body is all fagged-out and run down, if you are losing weight steadily, lack appetite, have no strength or energy—why not let Tanlac help you back to health and strength?

So many millions have been benefited by the Tanlac treatment, so many thousands have written to testify to that effect that it's sheer folly not to make the test.

Tanlac, you know, is a great natural tonic and builder, a compound, after the famous Tanlac formula, of roots, barks and herbs. It purges the blood stream, revitalizes the digestive organs and enables the sickly body to regain its vanished weight.

You don't need to wait long to get results. Tanlac goes right to the seat of trouble. In a day or so you note a vast difference in your condition. You have more appetite, sleep better at night and the color begins to creep back into your washed-out cheeks.

Don't put off taking Tanlac another precious day. Step into the nearest drug store and get a bottle of this world-famed tonic. That's the first important step back to health and vigor. Every day's delay means unnecessary suffering, for Tanlac starts to clean out and tone up the system right away. And by acting promptly you will avoid further loss of energy and weight due to your present run down condition. Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation.

Conquer Constipation with Yeast Foam!

For constipation try this: drop a cake of Yeast Foam in a glass of water; let stand for five minutes; stir with spoon; let settle and drink the milky water, including the white precipitate.

Do this regularly and your constipation—no matter of how long standing—will be a thing of the past! Yeast Foam is equally effective for indigestion, boils, pimples, lack of weight and strength.

Or, if you prefer, eat the yeast with a cracker or a piece of butter.

Like this man, thousands of people give hard to come stool only when it is too late.

"I'll tell you why they wouldn't insure you—"

"You allowed constipation to become chronic—until finally it resulted in organic disease.

"People don't realize how insidious constipation is. Its first effects are hardly more than annoyances—headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and the like. But in time, as the body is subjected to continued intestinal poisoning, it may lead to high blood pressure, rheumatism, diabetes or even Bright's disease.

"Stop constipation if you wish to live long. Take a little Nujol every day—that will keep you regular."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's way

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is safe, gentle and natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

It is absolutely necessary if you expect Alabastine results that you ask for and secure Alabastine.

Avoid kalsomines under various names and insist on the package with the cross and circle printed in red. That is the only way to be sure you are getting the genuine Alabastine.

Alabastine is easy to mix and apply, lasting in its results, and absolutely sanitary.

Alabastine is a dry powder, put up in five-pound packages, white and beautiful tints, ready to mix and use by the addition of cold water and with full directions on each package. Every package of genuine Alabastine has cross and circle printed in red.

If one sermon does not satisfy or please you, come back the following Sunday; he will have a different kind of subject if possible, with new approaches to our thought life and spiritual being. The pastor does not ask that you agree with him in all particulars, but he desires that we all think out our own interpretations and standards of life. And, he is always ready to hear your side of the subject. We are trying to stand for breadth of thought and tolerance of convictions.

The influenza and gripe epidemic has affected many of the members of the M. E. church in Orland. Then He Understood

A little Neodesha (Kan.) boy, according to the Sun, was shown a drop of water through a powerful microscope, and was impressed at the tiny objects which he was told were microbes. "I know now," he said, "what bites you when you drink soda water."

WHAT PRICE HEALTH
VALUE of health may not be reckoned in dollars and cents. Two thousand years ago there was perhaps some excuse for the gastronome, but today there is none. The way to health lies in a balanced diet. Hippocrates, the father of medicine, figured along the same lines back 450 B. C. He expressed the belief that the science of medicine had its beginning in the efforts of men and women to find better and smoother diets.

Diet in the home today is becoming a matter of premier consideration. Women are taking cognizance of those important food elements known as vitamins. They have learned, also, the benefit to the human body of such minerals as iron, calcium and phosphorus.

This knowledge has resulted in the housewife planning her menus with an eye open to dietary values, which is the big reason why milk has assumed such a large place in the menu of the American family. Milk contains every structural element for body building. It is an almost perfect food. Despite the best refrigeration facilities, milk will keep sweet only a short time. Millions of American housewives have solved this big problem by using evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in cans to achieve keeping qualities and with sixty per cent of the water removed.

Evaporated milk is not the same as condensed milk, although many persons confuse the two. The condensed product is a combination of milk and sugar, cane in a two-fifth cane sugar and three-fifth milk proportion. Evaporated milk has nothing but water taken from it and nothing at all added. Sugar is the preservative used in manufacturing the condensed product, while heat only is the preservative for evaporated milk. For this reason the evaporated product may be used in any way in which market milk is used.

When Business is Good

SATURDAY night is a mighty good time to ask yourself this question: "Is our community sending more money out of town than is coming in each week?" Of course the only safe answer is "NO!"

This means that we folks in this neighborhood must patronize local supply men and merchants if we expect our town to prosper and "stay on the map."

Frankly, it means that every citizen will find it most profitable to read the advertisements in this paper every issue, and to follow their good advice.

Our advertisers are all personally interested in this town—and in YOU. They are helping you build a better home community. When business is good, their profits are being shared with you in an endless chain of co-operative betterment.

Bell Telephone Passes Fiftieth Anniversary

One of the greatest gifts of America to the world is the telephone which has now reached its fiftieth milestone. On this fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence the telephone is being used by every civilized nation on the face of the earth. It speaks every language and carries the words of men, the young and old, the glad or sad, the words which dominate the actions of men and those which merely cheer them on their way.

In no other country has the telephone become so important in the daily life of the people as in the United States, which has today nearly 17,000,000 telephones, as compared to the 10,000,000 in Europe and all other countries. In the land of its birth the telephone has risen to a great estate. It serves a population of 112,000,000 who use it 50,000,000 times a day. It has done its part in making the United States the greatest and properous of all the nations. It has not only grown with the nation but it has helped to make it grow.
 It has helped to make the American people a homogeneous people.
 It has helped raise the standard of living and make a neighborhood of a continent.

How did it start?

Going back through the life of the telephone we come to the year 1876 which is pregnant with telephone history. Fifty years ago Alexander Graham Bell was busy with his experiments. The first sound and even disconnected words, had been heard electrically over a wire by means of his crude instruments.
 He had filed his patent at Washington, and was patiently carrying on his experiments. But it was not until March of that year that the first connected sentence was heard by telephone. It was not until the same month that his patent was granted, a patent called the most valuable that has ever been known.

They were getting ready for an exposition in Philadelphia in January, 1876, just as they are getting ready for an exposition there now. It was a hundred years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the United States had become sufficiently united so that they were preparing to join in the celebration with other friendly nations.

Great strides had been made in that period of a hundred years.
 The territory of the Union had been vastly increased. The empire of the great west had been acquired and was being rapidly settled.
 The country had its railroads, its steamboats, its telegraph and its mails, its Corliss engine and so many other wonderful things that it was quite complacent in showing them to the visitors from abroad.

The nation did not know that it had the telephone in embryo. It did not know that tucked away in an exposition building there was the germ of an art which would develop into the nerve system of the body politic. During the whole year the illustrated weeklies, like Harpers and Frank Leslie's, though they were constantly making mention of the exposition, said not a word about the telephone. Harpers Magazine, Scribner's and other popular publications may be searched in vain for any mention of Bell or his great invention.

Eve of Great Achievement

At that time the country was on the eve of a wonderful epoch of achievement. Not only was the telephone unknown, but there were no electric lights, no automobiles, no motion pictures, no typewriters,
 no electric cars, and naturally no aeroplanes, submarines or wireless.
 Looking backwards from today it was the day of small things, and the telephone started in a small way. It is well known now, although not known then, that Professor Bell rather doubtfully exhibited his "speaking telephone" at the Centennial Exposition, were it attracted no attention until a group of distinguished visitors led by Don Pedro, of Brazil, who had known Bell as an instructor of the deaf, tried the new invention. "My God, it speaks!" said Don Pedro and Lord Kelvin of England, after a scientist's careful scrutiny, said it was the greatest thing he had seen in America.

Bell with his assistant, Thomas A.
 Watson, and his far-sighted back-ers, Hubbard and Sanders, organized the nucleus of the Bell System, and began to improve, manufacture and install a few telephones, to be used between individual homes and offices. The idea of interconnecting the isolated groups soon followed and the first switchboard was a natural, though at that time, a very crude development.

Theodore N. Vail, persuaded to leave the U. S. Railway Mail Service, was induced to cast his lot with the infant industry with results beyond his own or anyone's expectations.

Songs of Troubadours

There were several kinds of songs sung by the troubadours—the canzo-net, or love song; serenade, or eve-ing song; aubade, or morning song; servante in praise of patrons, roundelay, or song with refrain or chorus;
 dance song accompanying the round dance, and the pastourelle, treating of Arcadian love.

JUDGE THE MAN

THE MAN FOR JUDGE RALPH C. AUSTIN CANDIDATE FOR REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR COUNTY JUDGE

The COUNTY COURT is the home and family Court. It takes care of neglected and delinquent children, grants mothers pensions, sends the insane, the feeble-minded and the epileptic to hosof the COUNTY JUDGE who looks after the unfortunate children the same as people demand that the teacher who educates their children and the doctor who treats them shall be well trained and thoroughly efficient.

This is the day of experts. Should this not apply to public office as well as to trade, profession or business.

RALPH C. AUSTIN has had fourteen years experience in handling County Court cases. He is regarded by his fellow lawyers as an expert on Special Assessments. He is forty years old and

WHOOPIING COUGH

Whooping cough is the most neglected of children's diseases, and one of the most dangerous. There are 6,822 deaths reported in a single year in the United States from this disease. There is no cure for whooping cough, it usually running its course, but relief can be given and its duration shortened. A few drops of Dr. Drake's Glissco will relieve the most violent paroxysms of coughing, and given regularly it will lessen the severity of the attacks and bring quicker recovery. Women, Don't Suffer!

Kokomo, Ind.—"I was suffering with all kinds of aches and pains—head, back and side, dizzy spells and nervousness. The doctors tried to help me and I tried all kinds of remedies but got little relief. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I hesitated on account of the failure of other treatments, but at last I tried it. One bottle helped me so much I got two more, and by the time I had taken them I was feeling like a different woman. It had relieved me of all aches and pains and made me well."—Mrs. Roy Griffie, 1225 W. Taylor St. All dealers.

"JOE LABRADOR."

SYNOPSIS.—Traveling by canoe on the Mississippi, on his way to Biloxi, in the early days of the settlement of Louisiana, William Brampton, English spy, known to Indians and settlers as the "White Indian," sees a Natchez Indian post a declaration of war against the French. For his own purposes, he hastens to Biloxi to carry the news to Bienville, French governor. Brampton meets an old friend, Joe Labrador, Indian halfbreed, who warns him Bienville has threatened to hang him as a spy. Brampton refuses to turn back. He falls in with Jules and Basile Mattor, on their way to Biloxi to secure wives from a ship, the Maire, bringing women from France. At Biloxi Brampton protects a woman from a sergeant's brutality. She tells him she is Claire Dahlgarde, picked up in a raid in Paris. Evidently well bred and educated, she is a mystery to Brampton. He intervenes to prevent a man, English, known as "Old Six Fingers," following her to New Orleans. A Frenchman, Francois Narbonne, slightly demented by stories he has heard of the riches of the New World, introduces himself. Bienville accuses Brampton of treachery, but the latter secures a respite from death by revealing the Natchez declaration of war. He is to await the arrival of a former companion, Damoan the Fox, who will exonerate or condemn him. Damoan has documents proving Brampton an English spy. Brampton receives a message from Claire, begging him to help her reach the English settlements. Brampton trusts Narbonne with a note to Claire promising to meet her at New Orleans. He plans his escape. After a struggle Brampton wrests the incriminating papers from Damoan and escapes from Biloxi.

I dipped into it and found the parched corn excellent and the bear's fat fresh. After my hard travel it was most palatable. I sat down and began eating. The Choctaw squatted on his heels before me, an expression almost radiating amusement lighting his eyes.

"What is your mark?" I asked, meaning his clan.

He stared over my head at the green branches for fully a minute; then answered.

"Long Claw comes from the Panthers. You are the White Indian from Biloxi."

This startled me, and put me on my guard, although I gave no sign as I nodded a careless affirmative. It would appear that the news of my flight had kept up with me.

"You also come from Biloxi?" I asked. He shook his head, saying:

"From a hunter's camp north of Biloxi. Two of my brothers live here with the Bread-Eaters."

He pointed in the direction of the Pascagoulas' village.

"Did you see the Frenchman they call the Fox pass your village on his way to Biloxi yesterday?"

There was an almost imperceptible flicker in his small eyes; and without waiting for the proper pause he immediately shook his head.

"I have eaten nearly all your corn, and now I must pay for it," I insisted.

"There will be a big feast tonight and I shall have much to eat," he answered, teetering back and forth on his heels.

He was a clumsy liar. It is a characteristic of many red men I have met to be as obvious as children when they try to deceive. Why should he carry a pouch full of corn if his journey from Biloxi was to end with a feast at Pascagoula bay? When he filled his pouch with corn and bear's fat he had expected to follow a trail which might take him to Pensacola.

I abruptly said:

"My medicine tells me you stand in the shadow of death. Is there any one to make a Last Cry for you?"

His eyes nearly closed and the powerful chest rose and fell quickly. When he spoke, however, his voice was composed, and he quietly said:

"I am of the Panther clan. I am a hunter. When I die my spirit will be very happy. My people plant corn and melons. I live by hunting, and the white man is spoiling the hunting. My ghost will be happy even if I have no wife to make the last cry. Does the White Indian's medicine tell him any more?"

"It tells that the path to Pensacola is very bad for you. I must cross the bay and take the path to the Spaniards," I said, rising to my feet.

His lips tightened. My departure was hurrying his plans and he did not like it. Suddenly he raised a hand for silence; it was a squirrel scampering through the foliage overhead.

"The White Indian shall take a little meat with him," he whispered, staring up into the green branches while he plucked his bow from his shoulder and strung it.

Without removing his gaze from the leafy canopy he drew a reed arrow from the quiver and placed it on the string. Then he commenced circling the tree, his head tilted far back. I could trace the movements of the squirrel by the slight stirring of the leaves. It began descending the trunk, and as it did so the Indian's head slowly reverted to a more normal position, and his outstretched hands holding the drawn bow gradually ceased pointing toward the zenith and swept forward to follow the telltale rustling down the tree trunk. Triumph flashed in his eye, and my medicine warned me I was a fool to stand there and be butchered, that the squirrel had given Sharp Claw his chance to strike.

He gave a quick low cry, and shifted his aim, and I went down on my face and felt my fur cap snatched from my head by the passing arrow. With a scream a panther might have sounded he leaped forward with his ax, while I tugged at my pistol. Had it missed fire, as it sometimes did, my chances would have been practically worthless. Down he went with both hands outstretched and nearly touching me, and for a bit we two lay there, the quick and the dead.

My first thought was to make the shore of the bay and signal for the packet to take me off. Common sense stepped in and told me to hide the dead man, as it might be the greater part of the day before the Mattors came inshore.

I cast about and found a hole, where the roots of an upturned oak had lifted the soil; and therein I placed the man of the Panther clan, who died because of treachery; also because he was a clumsy liar. Working swiftly I carefully obliterated all signs of the killing. Fortunately we had not grappled and disturbed the turf. A cunning rearrangement of moss and forest mold hid the dark stains left by the Claw when he fell on his face with the heavy pistol ball through his heart.

Making north from the scene of the fight I bent over a branch of a bay-bush to mark direction. I repeated this sign several times, knowing the Fox or his Indian allies would accept it as a token from the dead man.

Having done this much to mislead the enemy, I stole back to the shore and concealed myself. I dared not make a smoke for fear those on my track, or some of the Pascagoulas, would investigate it.

Now that I had a breathing spell I made myself comfortable in the underbrush at the edge of the timber and opened up the package of papers Damoan the Fox had carried inside his hunting-shirt. The first one I opened was my Canadian report, the data I had so foolishly entrusted to Damoan for delivery. Putting it in my pocket I gave my attention to the other papers. There were three of them, all from men high in the affairs of the colonies, and each directing my attention to a different branch of inquiry.

Any one of the four papers would have proved my occupation beyond a shadow of doubt and sent me to dangle in a noose. How Damoan had ingratiated himself into the good graces of my correspondents to the extent of making them believe he was a firm friend of mine and could be trusted to bring me instructions was a mystery. Had he delivered my Canadian report that act alone would have gone far to establish him as a good friend of the colonies. But he had obtained his evidence without surrendering my report.

I went over the list of inquiries, mentally checking off those I already had made, and memorized the others. Then I dug a hole deep under the bole of a white oak and buried all but my report on the French north of the Ohio. That document I risked on my person for a while longer. And, accustomed to snatching my rest when I could, I stretched out and went to sleep.

Voices were sounding close by when I opened my eyes. The sun hung low. Three pirogues had put in to allow four Pascagoulas to land. Nearly a dozen Indians remained in the dugouts, up to their knees in fish. What the four coming ashore were after puzzled me until I saw two of them carrying a net, and making for a sand-pit directly below my position, while the other two made for the grove with their bows and arrows in their hands. Their companions pushed off. The two on the beach emptied a quantity of clams on the sand and began gathering dry driftwood.

The men disappearing in the timber were after squirrels, or any other small game. Roasted clams and broiled squirrels! My mouth watered and I watched them enviously as they built their fire. Gradually a wisp of smoke climbed into the brassy heavens, increasing in volume as the clams, wrapped in seaweed, were thrown on the coals. What at first I took to be a gull, caught in the level sunbeams, became a sail. The boat drew nearer, practically running before the wind.

Here was an unforeseen dilemma. The Mattors had observed the smoke and had accepted it as my signal, and were coming in to take me off. Did I fail to show myself they would become frightened and put back to open sea and go about their business. If I showed myself I would startle the Pascagoulas, who would at once report the incident, and Biloxi would soon learn the truth. While I was willing the whole coast should think me safe in Pensacola I did not wish to bring punishment on the Mattors.

The boat lost the wind as it drew inside the bay and made slow progress toward the smoke. While scouring my wits for a way to avoid the clam-eaters and make the packet, a shrill cry rang out in the oaks behind me. It was a yelp of astonishment, possibly fear. The Indians on the sand leaped to their feet and started wildly toward the timber. The cry was repeated, this time in a signal, and the men below me gave an answering whoop and rushed for the grove. This second cry was one of discovery, and I believed the hunters had found the body of Sharp Claw.

Dismay was quickly replaced by a sense of satisfaction; the dead man had drawn the Pascagoulas from the shore. I only asked that Damoan and his red allies had found my signs and had hurried on toward Pensacola while I was asleep. Should they be at hand to witness the exhumation of the Choctaw they would know my signs were decoys and that I was not bound for the Spanish settlement.

The packet was now near enough for me to recognize the two Mattors. I had expected to swim for it, and if not for my musket it would have been simple enough. But before taking to the water I glanced up and down the shore and discovered a small pirogue. Running the risk of being seen I ran to this and pushed it into the water and paddled for the boat.

"Feet of the devil! Why did you not wait!" groaned Mattor pere, as I climbed aboard and kicked the pirogue free to drift ashore with the incoming tide.

I threw myself flat in the boat and Basile growled:

"The eyes of the world are watching us."

"Enough talk!" I commanded.

"There is no one on shore but some Indians. You must work the boat between Isle au Aigle and the Dauphine and sail for Pensacola."

"For Pensacola!" exclaimed Jules.

"When the sun goes down we'll change our course for Pontchartrain. There you will drop me and I will pick up a canoe. I have the pistoles I promised you."

"Monsieur is a gentleman. It is right we should help him," declared Basile. "Ho! ho! See how red the sun is!"

Mattor the elder crossed himself, and I heard him muttering: "There is blood on it!"

I wondered if it were an ill omen for me. I hoped it was the blood of Sharp Claw, the Choctaw.

gun and a bag of smoked meat, I paddled into the swamp growth, while the Mattors lost no time in putting about and working the packet into a light breeze and sailing south, doubtless to hide up in Lake Borgne for a while. Their alibi, if I were discovered by my enemies, would be of a geographical nature.

Keeping close to the bank and under shelter of the overhanging willows, I worked along slowly until the splash of a paddle ahead sent me into hiding. It was quite dark under the arching trees and I could not have told whether it was a white, red or black man approaching had not the fellow started a song popular on the St. Lawrence. As he drew abreast of my hiding-place I softly called:

"Joe Labrador!"

"The good saints!" he ejaculated, swerving his canoe with a swirl of his paddle and making toward me. "Hal-loa! Who calls to me from the dark in the voice of a white man?"

"The White Indian," I cautiously replied.

"Diab! Monsieur Brampton! What terrible folly! With the whole Gulf-Pensacola-the-upper-river, to travel you come here?" he growled. "And monsieur did me the honor to call the tete de bois! Are you indeed mad, my friend?"

"Why shouldn't I come here?" I asked as his canoe slid against mine and we grasped hands.

"Because word has been brought to la Nouvelle Orleans this very morning for the people to watch out for you, to take you prisoner and return you to Biloxi."

"We waste words. Why are you paddling down the bayou to the lake at the edge of night?"

"Oh, I go to the mouth of the bayou each night. Perhaps I am curious to know who enters the bayou."

"You have been watching for me to come!"

"Such is my weakness, my friend. Yes. Now we have met you must paddle back to the lake and up the Iberville. If you lack anything you shall stay here until I can bring it."

"What I lack must come from la Nouvelle Orleans," I whispered. "We will go there together. No one will see us. I will stop outside the settlement. You shall go inside and find a certain person and say a word from me. The person will come with you to me, I think."

He laughed without any amusement. "Oh, there are quite a few persons who would be glad to come with me to you. It is impossible, monsieur."

"Then I must push on alone. Good-by."

"Hold! I turn my canoe about. Follow me, madman! Tonnerre! Let his excellency hang us both and have done."

He was paddling up the bayou, and I followed him. When he halted within the village the straggling lights of New Orleans—that la Nouvelle Orleans which so many immigrants had been led to believe was another Paris—seemed very near.

From just beyond a warehouse came the thin sweet notes of a flute.

"Are Rouze and his people still here? There were six in his family two years ago. One of them played the flute," I said.

"Some will be here now, but their cabin is farther down. And they are all devoted to his excellency's interests," was the significant reply.

Shaft Would Have Value

It is strange that an expedition into the earth's interior has never been seriously attempted. If we could sink a shaft only twelve miles into the ground we might strike all the coal and oil that would be needed in millions of years. In all likelihood we should find radium, gold, silver, diamonds, and other gems of untold wealth, as well as wonderful new metals and fresh sources of energy.—Exchange.

County School Work Organized

County uniformity is necessary for progress in rural schools. To this end, August Maue, during his term of office, has written:

1. A County Course of Study.
2. A uniform list of text-books.
3. Monthly examination following the courses outlined.

These features bring economy of time and money. Uniform text-books save money as well as time, when children move from one district to another.

The Law Makes

The County Treasurer a Strong Factor in Making Assessments

The laws of the State of Illinois as enacted in 1898 and revised in 1923, make the County Treasurer ex officio supervisor of assessments in his county. Whose duty is to assemble all assessors and deputy assessors in his county before April 1st for consultation and shall give such instructions to them as shall tend to uniformity in the action of the assessors.

The supervisor of assessments is granted the same power as assessors to assess, make changes or alterations in the assessment of property.

It, therefore, follows that the County Treasurer should have a general knowledge of the values of all classes of property.

My wide experience in different lines of business activity exceptionally tends to qualify me for just such a position.

Not All "Tuskers"

TUSKERS are present only in the males of the Asiatic elephants and are only about half as large as those found in African elephants. Both sexes of African elephants have tusks, which contribute to the dwindling of the species, as the females are as liable as the males to be killed for the sake of the ivory.
